PM World Library membership fees slashed

Individual and group rates for scholar level access to all resources in the library reduced by 50%

20 April 2016– Dallas, London, Sydney – PM World has announced that it has slashed the membership fee structure for scholar level access to the PM World Library (PMWL). The PMWL is a global online resource for continuous learning related to program and project management. Launched in 2014, the library has seen registrations increase in recent months, now approaching 3,000 in dozens of countries.

Scholar level memberships have been reduced to $50/year, less if joining for multiple years. The per person rates drop even more with group registrations. For information, go to <http://pmworldlibrary.net/pmwl-welcome/>.

The PMWL contains all works originally published in the PM World Journal (PMWJ), in the PM World Collection where they have been tagged to dozens of key topics. The most recent can be found on the PMWL home page at www.pmworldlibrary.net. In addition, each author whose works have appeared in the PMWJ has a showcase page in the library where her or his profile and works can be found easily.

The PMWL also contains access to many other resources, including books, journals, magazines, blogs, news feeds, public resources, professional resources, major projects, industry-specific information, applications and hot topics, product and service information (marketplace), research resources, other libraries and other information of potential interest to both individuals and organizations.

The Scholar level membership provides access to everything in the PMWL, including access to the following EBSCO Business Source Complete databases:

- Business Book Summaries - Summaries of 2,500+ business books published over the last few decades, including important books by such authors as Stephen Covey, Edward De Bono, Peter Drucker, Malcom Gladwell, Seth Godin, Walter Isaacson, Rosabeth Moss Kanter, John Kotter, John Maxwell, Henry Mintzberg, Tom Peters, Michael Porter and many others. According to library director David Pells, "Access to the EBSCO databases for only $50 is not available to individuals anywhere else in the world. These databases are useful for researchers, students and organizations that need to research specific topics or issues. Normally only available through academic or corporate libraries, access through the PM World Library at such a low cost represents the most significant value we have created since the library was launched."

"We launched a research internship through the PMWL for university students late last year," Pells adds. "15 students at a dozen universities have joined so far; they are researching various topics and submitting new resources at a very fast pace. The library is growing in both range and content on a daily basis now. So is the value!"

Further discounts are available to members of professional associations and organizations. For information, go to <http://pmworldlibrary.net/member-discounts/> or contact info@pmworldlibrary.net.

Those who have previously registered for a trial membership can log in using their original ID and password, then upgrade to the scholar level at the new low rates. Or contact info@pmworldlibrary.net.
