Low-Cost Access to EBSCO Research Database renewed

Access to EBSCO's massive business publications database through PMWL renewed

12 November 2016 – Dallas, London, Sydney – PM World has announced that it has renewed its organizational subscription to the massive EBSCO Business Source Corporate Plus (BSC+) database for low-cost access for members of the PM World Library. Only available to organizations, the EBSCO BSC+ database provides access to several thousand academic journals and over 100,000 articles, papers, reports and other documents that can be searched on any program or project management topic, including full texts and abstracts. The EBSCO business source database, normally only available through university or corporate libraries, is one of the most robust and popular sources of reference information for business researchers. For graduate students, faculty or academic researchers no longer directly associated with a university, access to the EBSCO database through the PMWL offers a very low-cost option. According to PMWL Director David Pells, “We worked out an alliance with EBSCO last year to provide access to both their BSC+ database and their business book summaries database through the PM World Library. These are two of the largest databases of their kind in the world, fantastic resources for researchers and practitioners alike.”

Project management researchers can search hundreds of academic journals around the world, including AACE International Transactions, Academy of Management Journal, Asia Pacific Journal of Management, Australian Journal of Information Systems, European Journal of Business & Management, European Management Review, Engineering Management Journal, International Journal of Project Management, Journal of African Business, Project Management Journal, South African Journal of Business Management and many more.
