PMWJ Correspondents recognized for Outstanding Reporting

2018 Editor's Choice Awards announced for reports published in the PM World Journal during 2018

15 February 2019 – Dallas, London, Sydney – PM World has announced the winners of Editor's Choice Awards for student papers published in the PM World Journal (PMWJ) during 2018. 108 original student papers were published in the PMWJ in 2018, by graduate students at several accredited universities. Seven papers by student authors in four countries were selected for the 2018 awards. Five of the seven students are or were enrolled in 2018 at the Skema Business School in either Lille or Paris, France.

Editor's Choice Awards are selected each year by the Managing Editor of the PMWJ based on originality, potential impact on the practice and profession of program/project management, and quality. The Reports category is new this year, due to the number of reports published in the PMWJ and to recognize the work international correspondents have been producing for many years. According to PMWJ Managing Editor David Pells, “Each month we publish reports by international correspondents around the world. The reports cover local project management organizations and events, important local and national programs and projects, and local developments affecting local projects and PM. All of our current correspondents have been reporting for us for years; we thought it was time to better recognize their work. Read their reports each month to see what’s happening in other interesting parts of the PM world.”

“If you are an experienced project management professional and might like to become a PMWJ correspondent, please get in touch,” Pells adds. “Former leaders of local PMI chapters or national project management societies in particular have the knowledge and experience to report on important PM developments and trends. Stay engaged, share your knowledge and perspective, report the PM news from your city or region. Join the team!”
