Wideman PM Website updates announced for May 2020

1 May 2020 – Ontario, Canada – Max Wideman has announced updates to his popular project management website, www.maxwideman.com. According to Max:

This month we've posted the following:

Guests May #1: The coronavirus epidemic and the imposition of "social distancing" around the world has accelerated the use of video-conferencing by people necessarily working from home. Here, Howard Tiersky provides valuable advice to project team leaders and participants on how to Manage Teams Working from Home by conducting video-conferencing effectively.

Guests May #2: Thinking of taking up project management career? Not satisfied with your present project management status? Angela Civitella presents three short articles providing practical tips and suggestions on successfully managing your project management career. Check out Angela's practical tips and suggestions on Getting, Organizing, and Running a Project.

Musings: A lesson from nature, another from childhood, what it means to mankind, and PMI project managers' attempts to launch an awareness campaign. Now we currently have a world-wide death-causing pandemic teaching us the same lesson.

Max asks: Is nature trying to teach us a lesson here? If so, why are we so reluctant to tackle The Biggest Project of All?

Project management tip of the month: The "can't find it" principle:
If you cannot find it, you are looking in the wrong place.
