The Impact of the COVID-19 Crisis on Project Business

12 June 2020 – Sisseln, Switzerland – Today, the Project Business Foundation is proud to release the findings of the special COVID-19 Crisis Survey Report as the result of a jointly conducted survey with the Project Management Institute. This partnership effort highlighting the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the global project management community was undertaken with a special focus on project managers who are either employed or contracted in a project business context.

As early as March of this year the Project Business Foundation reached out to the Project Management Institute and the two partner organizations realized the need for immediate action in assessing the implications of the pandemic on individual project professionals and whole organizations during and after the expected dire economic impact on the project economy.

Please find raw field data as well as the key findings and takeaways from the survey, pulled together in order to distill how we can all support the community, weather the storm together and grow even stronger with a sharpened perspective on new opportunities.
