AEDIP adhered to the manifesto for the adoption of good practices of Project Management in the Management of European Funds

The European plan "Next Generation EU", designed to revive the European economy in the post-pandemic scenario, and transform the productive fabric of the union will leave around 4500 million euros for the rehabilitation of the building stock in our country. AEDIP joins the manifesto drafted by PMI Madrid, AEIPRO, IPMA and PM2 in the revindication of the principles and methodologies of Project Management and Management as the best way to manage European funds.

AEDIP, as an association of companies specialized in the provision of services based on the methodologies of Project Management and Management in the construction sector, endorses the demands of the manifesto and shares the need for the different levels of administration to adhere to the methodologies and tools of Project Management and Management.

AEDIP supports both organizations and professionals involved in Project Management to demonstrate both their training and experience in project management and is in favor of its regulation by law for projects, programs and portfolios in the public administration.

"The body of knowledge of Project Management has evolved over the past 60 years to manage projects, programs and portfolios as efficiently as possible. It is an inescapable responsibility for the administration to make use of the best tools available to manage the funds from the European taxpayer. We must not forget that these grants are intended to improve people's lives, and that the better they are managed, the greater the positive impact they will produce," says José Gil (AEDIP secretary).

On June 2, 2021 at 6:30 p.m. an event was held to publicize that manifesto.

XVIII Annual Congress of Project Managers "Recovery and resilience, projects for a new stage"

XVIII Congreso de Directores de Proyectos
Recuperación y resiliencia, proyectos para una nueva etapa

17 de noviembre de 2021
15:30h a 19:30h CET
Teatro Casa de Vacas
Parque de El Retiro

There has been a “before” and “after” in project management during the year 2020, previously unthinkable forms of work have been used massively, new ways of coordinating teams and, above all, work without direct interpersonal contact has become popular. Various government organizations, such as the European Union, have had a huge amount of means to achieve recovery, aiming to emerge stronger from the pandemic. "It is time to work to create a greener, more digital and more resilient Europe."

The purpose of the XVIII Annual Congress of Project Managers is to objectify this transformation, generate spaces where to share theoretical and practical knowledge of these projects, and give visibility to the importance of the recovery processes, including the people involved and the processes underway.

How is this recovery taking place? What are the most relevant recovery projects? Are there and will there be transformations or simple adaptations?

Who is carrying out these recovery processes? Is there a Project Manager in charge of these processes? How do organizations assume this?

What has been and is being the profile of the Project Manager in charge of these recovery projects? What are your Competencies? To try to answer these current questions, PMI Madrid Spain, has focused the theme of this Congress paying special attention to the events of 2021, and with special focus on the following aspects:

- Relevant recovery projects.
- Who, how and why these processes have been carried out during this year?
- How public or private organizations, and even government, are performing to plan for transformation and recovery.

The Congress will be divided into 4 blocks, practically coinciding with the recovery plans underway: Environment, Digital Transformation, Demographic Cohesion, and Social and Territorial Cohesion.

The Congress will be held next Wednesday, November 17, 2021 from 3:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the Casa de Vacas Theater, located in the Retiro Park in Madrid, with limited capacity given the current circumstances, and will be free access via "streaming" through the usual channels of the Chapter, in order to increase the dissemination of Project Management with companies and professionals not only from Spain but from all over the world of Spanish speaking.
