Talk Around the Clock in Support of Children from Ukraine

Munich, 7 April 2022: Some of the world's most distinguished speakers and trainers in Project Management have joined forces for a 24-hour public conference which will take place on 27 and 28 April 2022.

All speakers are volunteering for the event, and revenues from the conference will go to UNICEF's program for children from Ukraine.

Coming from various countries, each speaker will talk about a topic in project management and leadership that the person specializes in. This includes Agile practices, Earned Value Management, and Project Business Management. The trainers come from various continents, including North and South America, Europe, Africa, Asia, and Australia. As the conference goes full 24 hours, the expectation is that the audience will be international too.

The conference will also include a panel discussion on what relevance a "Moral Compass" should have for project managers today and what it may look like.

Patric Eid, the event's initiator, gave some further insights: "We are very concerned about the impact that wars, famine, exploitation, and other tragedies have on families. The war in Ukraine has been a trigger to motivate us to come together. The profits of this conference's admission fee will be donated to UNICEF's support for children and families from Ukraine. But we are already thinking of other worthwhile causes."

The conference is supported by PMI, Project Management Institute, the Project Business Foundation, and the Valense Network.
