Participate in Research Survey on AI and Project Management

Participants will have access to survey results

18 October 2022 – Sao Paulo, Brazil – Participants are sought for a new global survey on Artificial Intelligence and Project Management being led by Prof. André Barcaui in Brazil. Dr. Barcaui is the director of the Project Management MBA program at Fundação Getúlio Vargas (FGV - Getúlio Vargas Foundation) in São Paulo.

The diffusion of artificial intelligence (AI) projects has grown actively in the last decade in the most diverse segments of activity. Therefore, its insertion in project management seems to be a natural path. This possibility suggests the need for adaptation from organizations as well as from project managers in terms of their competences. But how is the status of this movement and what are the prospects? It is precisely on these instigating points that the present research focuses.

Take the opportunity to participate and share your vision and experience on the potential impacts of AI on project management. Are project managers being replaced by robots in the near future? Help find out!
