Call for Speakers for 2024 University of Maryland Project Management Symposium

Share your project management stories and experience with 800+ at one of the world's most successful hybrid PM conferences

11 October 2023 – College Park, MD, USA – The Project Management Center for Excellence at the University of Maryland is seeking presenters for their 2024 Project Management Symposium in April 2024. According to their announcement:

As a seasoned project manager, have you ever thought about the fact that your everyday work experience executing projects results in valuable lessons learned. Your experiences provide an extremely valuable learning opportunity, but only if they are shared with other practitioners. It does not matter if those other project managers work at the same company or even in the same industry. Project Management best practices and lessons learned transcend all industry types.

Your job is demanding and as a result you've got stories. War stories, success stories, failures, and lessons learned. The Project Management community wants to hear them!

We, at the University of Maryland \(UMD\) Project Management Center for Excellence, recognize the importance of sharing your project management experiences, best practices and lessons learned. Ten years ago, we initiated the development of an annual two-day project management symposium which allows project managers from any industry the opportunity to share their knowledge and experiences.

The text reads: "We're Looking For Speakers" in yellow, "Tell Your Story" in large white font, "Share Your Insights" in large white font, "UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND PROJECT MANAGEMENT SYMPOSIUM" in white, "Event Dates April 18-19, 2024" in yellow, "Abstracts Due November 13" in white, and "PMSYMPOSIUM.UMD.EDU" in yellow. At the bottom right, there is a small logo for the Project Management Center for Excellence.

Over 850 project managers will participate in the Project Management Symposium on April 18-19, 2024 (our 11th event). They attend to hear from each other, ask questions, and learn together. It's a community that's growing and open to anyone interested and involved in project management.

There are many reasons why you might want to consider presenting and sharing your stories, at our April 18-19, 2024 event.

- Share your story and connect with other like-minded professionals
- Recording of live presentation, PowerPoint slides, and paper (if developed) available for participants to view after the event is over
- Potentially get published in the online PM World Journal or featured in a PM Point of View podcast
- Earn "Give Back" PMI PDUs to prepare and deliver your presentation
- A very flexible submission process plus helpful symposium staff

The number one reason to consider presenting is simply to share your personal project management experiences with others – or Giving Back to the project management community in which you participate.

If you are interested in challenging yourself and sharing your project management experiences with other practitioners in the industry, UMD is now accepting presentation abstracts for their April 18-19, 2024 Project Management Symposium. Find out more information and see the Topics of Interest. Abstracts will be accepted through midnight (eastern time) on Monday, November 13, 2023.
