According to PMWJ editor David Pells, “I was delighted to receive Theofanis’ email indicating his interest in rejoining our correspondents team. He brings a new wealth of experience and knowledge related to traditional, agile and hybrid project, program and portfolio management in various European countries. With a deep involvement in the Greek PM field, he is well positioned to inform us about developments there now and in the future.”

Theofanis stated, “The PM World Journal has become a well known and respected publication, followed by many professionals in Greece and nearby countries. I would like to both contribute to the journal again, as well as raise the visibility of project management in Greece. With all the turbulence in the region, Greece is again well positioned to play a major role in addressing important geopolitical issues. Greek programs and projects will be highly visible and important.”

Pells added, “Theofanis has been very active in the standards and qualifications arena in recent years. He is also very well connected. His renewed involvement should bring additional attention and credibility to the journal and library.”

PM World correspondents are located in various countries, reporting news about local and regional projects, and project management organizations, events and developments. To see current correspondents and to follow their work, visit <https://peworldlibrary.net/international-correspondents/>
