

AIPMO Announces Research and Content Partnership with PM World to Advance PPM/PMO Understanding

WOLLERAU, Switzerland - Sept. 18, 2024 - PRLog -- The Association of International Project Management Officers (AIPMO) is proud to announce an exciting new partnership with Project Management (PM) World, a leading global platform for continuous project and program management learning. This collaboration aims to drive advancements in project management and PMO management knowledge and foster a more informed, connected, and skilled community of Project Management Office (PMO) professionals.

PM World Journal (PMWJ) is recognized worldwide for its commitment to sharing insights, research, and practical knowledge from experienced professionals, academics, and leaders in project management. The journal, published monthly by PM World, Inc., serves as a beacon for project management professionals, providing valuable resources through its extensive archives and the PM World Library (PMWL), an online repository designed to support continuous learning in project management.

Founded in 2015, AIPMO is a leading research/practitioner organization representing International Project Management Officers. It is dedicated to defining, establishing, and running high-performing PMOs in and across industry sectors. The association sets industry standards, provides certifications, and fosters a global community of excellence in PMO management. AIPMO further supports the PMO profession through its publications, blog contributions, book reviews, and promotion of knowledge exchange and best practices across the industry.

"We are thrilled to partner with PM World," said Dr. Robert Joslin, Founder of AIPMO. "This collaboration enables us to further our mission of elevating PMO management as a profession by making our research and expertise accessible to an even broader global audience. By working together, we can create greater opportunities for learning, knowledge sharing, and professional development for project management professionals worldwide."

PM World Journal's global reach and dedication to publishing high-quality content align with AIPMO's vision of promoting good practices and innovative research in PMO management. This partnership will provide AIPMO members and the broader project management community access to both organizations' resources, helping them stay at the forefront of industry developments.

David Pells, Editor-in-Chief of PM World Journal, echoed this enthusiasm: "We are happy to partner with AIPMO because of their innovation and structured approach to expand the body of knowledge in PPM and PMO management and support the professional growth of our readers. We particularly like the innovation AIPMO shows, for example, in their unique 10-point book review system, and blogs that provide alternative perspectives to mainstream thinking."

AIPMO's thought leadership in PMO management perfectly complements PM World's mission of fostering continuous learning and professional excellence. Together, we aim to make a meaningful impact on the future of PMO and project management.
