

IPMA World Congress 2025: The Project Management Community Gathers in the Heart of Europe

Berlin, Germany – August 27, 2025 – From September 17 to 19, 2025, the international project management community will convene in Berlin for the 34. IPMA World Congress, hosted by the German Project Management Association (GPM Deutsche Gesellschaft für Projektmanagement e.V.). The event invites you to enjoy two days filled with 4 keynotes, 50 PM talks with 60 speakers as well as 1,000 participants from 70 countries, with a limited availability of remaining tickets.

Under the theme “Shaping the Future with Project Management,” keynote speeches, expert talks, practical examples, case studies, and academic contributions will highlight the pivotal role of projects and project management in addressing global challenges. The event also celebrates the 60th anniversary of the International Project Management Association (IPMA).

Discover Trends, Innovations, and Best Practices

The congress offers an ideal platform to explore the latest trends, innovations, and best practices in project management. Professionals from diverse industries and countries will come together to exchange insights on the future of project management. Networking will also be a key focus, with ample opportunities to build valuable connections and engage with peers on an international level.

Celebrate IPMA’s 60th Anniversary

In 2025, the International Project Management Association (IPMA) will celebrate its 60th anniversary, marking six decades of innovation and progress in project management. Since its founding in 1965, IPMA has grown from a small group of experts into a global organization with over 70 member countries. It has set numerous standards, trained professionals worldwide, and raised awareness of the importance of professional project management across all industries.

About the Hosts

GPM (Deutsche Gesellschaft für Projektmanagement e. V.) is the leading competence network for project management in Germany and the GPM is the National Member Association of IPMA in Germany.. As a non-profit professional association with over 6,500 members, GPM has been committed to the professionalization and advancement of project management in business, public administration, and society for over 40 years. Its core focus lies on education, certification, and the exchange of future-proof methods – with the goal of empowering people to successfully manage projects and drive effective change.

The International Project Management Association \(IPMA\) is a global umbrella organization for project management, with member associations in over 70 countries. As a worldwide network, IPMA promotes knowledge exchange, develops international standards, and offers a globally recognized certification system for project managers. IPMA combines local expertise with a global perspective, bringing together people from all industries and continents to shape the future of project management collaboratively.