Project Forum to Unite Project Management Professionals and Sponsors in London

Introducing Project Forum – the UK's newest event for project management professionals and solution

The House of PMO is proud to announce Project Forum, a dynamic new exhibition designed to connect sponsors with project, programme, and portfolio management professionals from across industries. This one-day event will take place at the Business Design Centre in London, offering a focused platform for meaningful engagement, knowledge exchange, and business development.

With participation already confirmed by leading solution providers including ProSymmetry, Ninth Wave, and Power Framework, Project Forum is poised to become a key date in the project management calendar. The event responds to growing demand for in-person interaction, professional development, and insight into industry challenges and innovations.

The event will feature:

- A curated exhibition showcasing the latest project management tools, services, and methodologies.
- Insightful seminar sessions from thought leaders in the PMO and PPM space.
- Interactive "Birds of a Feather" roundtable discussions focused on real challenges and future-focused solutions.

"Project Forum is not just about meeting potential clients – it's about understanding them," said Nicola Whiteley, Event Manager at the House of PMO. "We're creating an environment where sponsors and professionals can explore real challenges and opportunities together."

The event is targeted at people working in project management today, while also welcoming sponsors, service providers, and industry stakeholders looking to connect directly with key decision-makers and influencers. With a format centred on participation and meaningful engagement, attendees will gain practical insight, form valuable partnerships, and leave with ideas they can act on.
